The Relaxing Summer

Grant and Linda took a trip with their old Scamp trailer. They had no real objective in mind as they left Sonoma, in fact they didn't know which direction they were going until they hit the road. The first day they headed up I80 toward the Sierras and stopped at Donner Memorial State Park. Four nights there just poking around the area was restful. Then north up Highway 89 to Plumas Eureka State Park which is an old gold mining site. Four more nights there again just poking around doing a little panning for gold (no luck - but fun). Then further north to Lava Beds National Monument which is a favorite of theirs. A couple of nights there and then onward to Crater Lake in Oregon for a couple more nights. Westward then out to the coast and to Bandon - very pretty but also very windy. From there southward to Del Norte and then Patrick's Point State Parks and home. When they got home they were so enthusiastic about this kind of traveling that they ordered up a new Scamp - three feet longer - with a bathroom!! It arrived in late September and after getting the van ready to pull it a short weekend trip out to the Sonoma Coast served as a shake-down run. They can hardly wait until some free time to go again.

The Boys' Travels

Kevin went to Florida with some friends at the end of school last summer.

Charlie went to Mexico on a cruise with his room mates. They left from Southern California and went down the coast to Mexico. They had a great time.

Pat and Julie also went to Mexico to Puerto Vallarta for a week with another couple. They just got back - had a great time lying in the sun and bartering for gifts and things.

Linda's move at school

The school district decided to replace the portable building that Linda worked in this summer. It housed all the resource materials for the reading program and Title I program so was very full of stuff. The week after school was out she had to supervise the packing and moving of all the materials out of the building and onto the stage of the multipurpose room for the summer. The new building was to be delivered in early August. It actually arrived in October and still is not completely functional - no heat. It has been stressful to say the least.

You blew it! The boat is sold and you missed your opportunity. A sucker (oops a really good home) was found for the boat with the family of a former student of Grant's.
